

BUCK MASSIE WINS

CLUB MEMBERS HANDICAP IS RUN AT ST. LOUIS.

Worth Five Thousand to the Winner—Hard Rain Makes the Track Heavy and Upsets All Hopes of Broken Records, But 2:09 is Considered Fair Time, Under the Circumstances—Raniero is Second and Flying Dutchman Third—Manhattan and Patchogue Stakes at Gravesend—Trotting Races at Denver.

St. Louis, June 6.—Ten thousand people witnessed a splendid race at the fair grounds today. The Club Members' Handicap was the event of the season. A heavy rain about 1 o'clock made the track very heavy and spoiled what would have been a record breaker for this event and track. But the time, 2:09, was taken, everything in consideration, was a remarkable performance.

Assignee, at 11 to 5, was very up at the post, kicking and plunging like a wild horse, and refused to break. When he finally made up his mind to be pushed forward like mad and in doing so stopped and sprang one of his forelegs, going nearly to the ground and throwing the rider, who fortunately escaped without serious injury. The judges declared all bets off and a new book was made, in which Flying Dutchman was favorite and Buck Massie, second choice. The horse got off to a beautiful start on the first break, Raniero on the pole and Manhattan on the outside, Madeline being in the lead, closely followed by Raniero, Buck Massie and Flying Dutchman, and the others close up. Flying Dutchman led by half a length from Buck Massie, with Free Advice, Simon and Madeline in the rear. The horses ran in this order to the stretch, when Buck Massie came out and won by a half length. Madeline, who had been trailing the bunch, made a dash for the flying leader, but Simon had waited too long and the best he could get was second by a head after a hard drive from Flying Dutchman, half length behind him. Free Advice, who was half a length in front of Madeline, with Simon W. close up, last. Three favorite starters won the other events. Summaries:

First race—Madison 2-year-olds, purse $100, 2:00 to the winner, mile. Time 1:25. Second—3-year-olds, selling, purse $100, mile. Pinky of the West won. Time 1:30. The first was the Manhattan stakes, in which St. Pauli was the favorite, but he was overthrown by the second choice, Patchogue, who won by a head. The second was the Patchogue stakes, in which Patchogue was the favorite, but he was overthrown by the second choice, Simon W., who won by a head.

THEY WANT HER BAIL. Plaintiff Who Didn't Wait the Defendant: To Go to Jail.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 6.—Pitman and hysterical cries chiefly distinguished the conduct of Miss Juliette Colet, of No. 124 West Lehigh avenue, at the trial of her domestic servant, before Judge Ketchum, at the Pennsylvania district station house yesterday morning on the charge of maliciously destroying property in the works of Nuttall & Brown, at Coral and Dreer streets. And the outcome of the hearing was an exceptional hearing that had been heard or reviewed on her side, and apparently outweighed material loss on the other. Although she acknowledged the motive that had prompted her impetuously to seek revenge on her maid, she pleaded that she was not malicious, but that she was only a woman.

The fact was clearly established that Miss Colet was the discarded mistress of Mr. Nuttall. During the hearing, Miss Colet, who wept continuously, listened closely to the recital of testimony of both partners as to their belief that she was the guilty one. Mr. Nuttall told how he had visited the workshop on Sunday and found everything all right. But on Monday, when he went there ready for business, he found things in a shocking condition. Rolls of carpets had been hacked with a razor until they were only fit for carpet rags; chenille table covers were slashed into shreds, while yards upon yards of terry had been snipped with scissors, and a mass of stockings had their feet severed from their legs. Now was this all, for the dye had been mixed with paste, and the books of the firm, together with valuable papers, had been burned under the boiler in the engine room.

Convicted of Manslaughter. Holton, Kan., June 6.—Samuel T. Newman, who shot and killed his wife's paramour, Charles Hoover, near here last October, has been convicted of manslaughter in the second degree. Sentence has not been pronounced. At a previous trial the jury failed to agree.

Warships to Build. YANKEES WILL CONSTRUCT BATTLESHIP FOR JAPAN.

One of the chiefs of the Japanese Navy Department is on his way hither with contracts in his pocket—One ship will go to the Union Iron Works of San Francisco and the other to the Cramps at Philadelphia—New Line of Pacific Steamers to be run in the Near Future Between Portland, Ore., and Japan.

San Francisco, June 6.—S. Asano, one of the chiefs of the naval department of the government of Japan, will arrive in San Francisco on the next steamer from the Orient with contracts in his possession for the building of two warships for the country he represents. One of these, it is understood, will go to the Union Iron works in this city and the other to the Cramps company in Philadelphia.

Captain M. Boegolny, charge d'affaires of the Japanese navy, arrived from Tokyo on the Peru last night to visit Irving M. Scott and arrange for the building of the ship which has been awarded to his company. After closing up his business here he will go to Philadelphia to consult with the Cramps.

Another important matter connected with the coming visit of Asano to the Pacific coast is the opening of a new steamship line between Tokyo and the Pacific coast. In heralding the advent of this new line Asano will say that it will handle freight cheaper than either of the lines running from San Francisco and Puget Sound, and that the landing place on this coast will be at Portland, Ore.

TO WOMEN ONLY. Free Treatment for Diseases Peculiar to Females.

In a lecture to women recently Dr. Hartman, of the Surgical Hotel, concluded his remarks as follows: "No one knows better than I how much some women suffer with diseases peculiar to their sex. No one knows better than I how many of these suffer with such diseases. Patiently, hopefully, wearily, and often silently, they seek out a miserable existence, and live in pain. No martyr in poetry or heroine in romance makes a more touching appeal to human sympathy than the woman burdened with the care of a family trying to carry the extra load of some tormenting and over-present female disease."

To all such we would say: Write him, giving him a careful description of your symptoms, and he will promptly advise you what to do, and continue to correspond with you until you are well. He will direct every detail of the treatment by letter without charge. The medicines he prescribes will be able to get at the nearest drug-store. room. Mr. Nuttall and his partner were appalled at the damage, which, even from a monetary standpoint, could not be computed at less than $600, although some of the losses could be repaired at once with money.

She listened attentively to this testimony and heard disinterested witnesses tell that they had seen her try the doors of the mill on Sunday afternoon, and she heard the police tell of the finding of a key in her possession which looked and unlocked one of the mill doors.

Moreover, she heard Jonas Nuttall, one of the partners and her stoutest accuser of the crime, tell how, although a married man with wife and children in England, he and she had lived together for years in this country as man and wife. Threats of bodily harm which she said he had made against her, and that he had threatened to kill her, were also heard.

Sternly the magistrate addressed the lady Juliette and said: "What have you to say about all this?" Raising her head for the first time, she answered in a French accent: "I am not guilty of this charge. I will swear to that," as she placed her trembling right hand on her forehead.

Juliette's story, which followed, caused even those who had stood grinning in the audience to lean forward with interested faces and listen with deep interest. She had gone to the mill, she said, on Sunday afternoon, to look for Mr. Nuttall. Having tried the door, and found it locked, she had then gone over to Norris Square to wait awhile, hoping he would come to the mill. Later on, about 8 o'clock p. m., she had again gone to the mill, and finding the door open, had walked in. The place was filled with smoke, she said, and she went down to the first floor, where she saw the books and papers smoldering in ashes. She made a tour through the mill, ever full of which she knew, because of her frequent visits there with Mr. Nuttall on former occasions, but at that time (Sunday) she noticed no vandalism. The key found in her possession, she said, was the one to her own door at home, and if it would unlock the mill door she did not know it.

To the magistrate's questions she answered: "I did many times make threats against him, and I blackened his eyes, and he took it like a man. It was my temper that caused me to do those things; but I was always sorry afterwards, and they were made up."

Turning partly around in her chair, so as to look straight at Mr. Nuttall, who stood near, she said: "Although appearances are against me, I declare before God I am innocent of these charges. I did not do any damage in the mill, and I have a voice, almost choked with emotion, she said: 'Mr. Nuttall has other enemies who may have done this thing, and knowing it would be all blamed on me.'

The magistrate could do nothing less, he said, than hold her in $100 bail for court, on a charge of trespass and an attempt to commit malicious mischief.

At this announcement Juliette screamed and sobbed out that she had not one friend in the country to go bail for her. When Sergeant Taylor & Brown, Special Policemen, placed their hands on her shoulders and said: "You will have to go back to a cell," she wailed in despairing protest.

And her partner, Mr. Brown, began to grow nervous. They left the hearing room two or three times only to return, and finally the junior partner, Mr. Brown, addressed himself to the magistrate: "Judge, I couldn't help it. My wife was so excited that she was sent to jail. She may be innocent and it might kill her."

"Yes; that's true, chimed in Mr. Nuttall. The look he added, he had figured out to find, and he looked no less said about the matter the better for all concerned.

The magistrate suggested that the only way to keep the woman out of jail was to let her bail, and his suggestion being approved by Nuttall & Brown, the partners promptly went bail for Miss Colet, who was released and departed. James Nuttall is an Englishman of middle age. He has a wife and three children living in Kansas City. When he came to this country some years ago he brought his wife with him, but America was not to Mrs. Nuttall's liking, and she soon returned to England. Nuttall was lonely and he looked about him for a companion of the gender sex. Then his fancy lit upon Miss Colet, a girl from Belgium. This was in 1888, and the pair started housekeeping in New York City. From thence they traveled to various cities in the eastern states, and finally settled down in Philadelphia. Here life was not all sunshine, as has already been stated, and they separated, but subsequently met each other occasionally, as they did on Saturday last, when the latest threats were made.

Convicted of Manslaughter. Holton, Kan., June 6.—Samuel T. Newman, who shot and killed his wife's paramour, Charles Hoover, near here last October, has been convicted of manslaughter in the second degree. Sentence has not been pronounced. At a previous trial the jury failed to agree.
